ISSUES WITH THE EDUCATION SYSTEM

- Despite reforms, Ghana's Education System faces challenges such as poor infrastructure, overcrowded classrooms, inadequate furniture, lack of sanitation facilities, insufficient teaching and learning materials, limited access for some students, and inadequate resources for disabled children. Consequently, many students fail to complete Primary or Secondary Education, with girls and rural students being disproportionately affected.
- In Ghana, lower Education rates are directly linked to higher incidences of childhood marriage, teen pregnancy, HIV/AIDS infection rates, and continued poverty, particularly for women and girls in rural areas.
- Unfortunately, nearly a third of students enrolled in Ghanaian Schools do not complete primary school and only 47% complete secondary school.
- Children from more affluent families are more likely to complete the highest levels of education, as compared to children from the poorest families. For example, UNICEF said 71% of children from the wealthiest homes complete the Highest Level of Education, but only 9% of children from the poorest families achieve the same result.
- Girls from the poorest families on average obtain 4 years of education, while girls from the wealthiest obtain 13 year
